

Use of computed tomography in livestock and carcass grading.

Maria Font MSc in Agricultural Engineering (1994), in Food Science and Technology (1997) and in Psychology (2011). She obtained her PhD in 2000 at the Polytechnic University of Catalonia, Department of Statistics and Operative Investigation. She is researcher at the Institute of Research and Agro-Food Technology (IRTA) in Catalonia since 2000. Today she is the head of the Product Quality Program. She works mainly in carcass and meat quality evaluation, in the use of computed tomography to evaluate live animals and carcasses, in boar taint and in consumer studies. She has more than 80 peer-reviewed papers, more than 170 communications in national and international congresses, more than 50 technical papers and several book chapters. She has participated in several national and international projects as a researcher of the team or main researcher.

Maria Font i Furnols

MSc in Agricultural Engineering (1994), in Food Science and Technology (1997) and in Psychology (2011). She obtained her PhD in 2000 at the Polytechnic University of Catalonia, Department of Statistics and Operative Investigation. She is researcher at the Institute of Research and Agro-Food Technology (IRTA) in Catalonia since 2000. Today she is the head of the Product Quality Program. She works mainly in carcass and meat quality evaluation, in the use of computed tomography to evaluate live animals and carcasses, in boar taint and in consumer studies. She has more than 80 peer-reviewed papers, more than 170 communications in national and international congresses, more than 50 technical papers and several book chapters. She has participated in several national and international projects as a researcher of the team or main researcher.